EXHIBIT A PINE TELEPHONE SYSTEM, INC. COMPLIANCE EXPLANATION

Pine Telephone System, Inc. ("Pine") uses the following safeguards and procedures to protect the customer proprietary network information ("CPNI") of Pine's customers.

Pine's company policy is that no account information is released on any customerinitiated or third-party-initiated telephone call. The only way Pine CPNI is released is (a) through a telephone call initiated by Pine to the customer at the telephone number of record for that respective customer, (b) through sending information to the customer at the address for the telephone number of record or (c) through disclosure in person to the customer after satisfactory verification of identity by photo I.D.

No online account access is provided to customer accounts. No CPNI is released to any person through any password system.

On November 13, 2007, all employees of Pine attended a web training seminar on how to protect CPNI. The seminar was provided by a telecommunications consultant, Consortia.

Pine does not use or disclose to any other persons any CPNI for sales or marketing campaigns. Thus, because there have been no disclosures of CPNI to third parties or allowed access to third parties for sales or marketing, there are no records of disclosures.

Pine does not engage in any outbound marketing operations utilizing CPNI. There are no sales personnel in Pine who release any CPNI for any outbound marketing request.

Pine has an express disciplinary process in place for unauthorized disclosures. Any employee who violates the rules against unauthorized disclosure of CPNI is subject to disciplinary action, specifically loss of a day's pay for each occurrence and possible termination of employment. This is contained in the compliance manual of Pine on CPNI.
